(Long-term parking)

It's 4:30pm on Monday at work, Rebecca gets an alert from the work calendar that her next 4-month morning shift starts next Monday. Starting next week, she is going to work from 7AM to 3PM. When she gets back home from work in the late afternoon, she searches for driveway around Good Samaritan Hospital for four months. After putting length of time she wants to park (from October 7 to Jan 7, Monday to Friday from 6AM to 4PM, which gives her a little more padding time for her to go in between her company and the parking place) she gets a list of suggested driveways. She gets Madeline's driveway again, the one she used before. Rebecca quickly scanned through the photos of driveway, distance from the company, and re-checked the ratings, she's sure Madeline's parking slot is the one she'd like to use again, as she feels safe with parking at her driveway, the one she has had satisfied experience before. She books and pays for Madeline's driveway by making sure the time is correct and re-confirm the address and price information. Then she's done with the reservation on Alee.

(Pay)

After two weeks from October 7, Rebecca receives an email on monday morning telling her that biweekly transaction went through with the credit card information that she puts in Alee.

(Homeowner - cancel)

On Monday morning at the office while looking at the calendar, Madeline just realizes that next week Thursday is Thanksgiving, and she offered a drive to pick up some friends in order to celebrate the festival in her house together. She sees that Rebecca already reserved to park on the driveway for Thursday, but in order to have the driveway for her own car to park, she still goes ahead and turns off the parking availability for that day, then all reservations get canceled on Thursday, Nov 27.

(Driver – adapt options)

Rebecca gets a notification that her reservation has been canceled on Thanksgiving. She sees other recommended driveways that are similar to Madeline's and reserves one of them.

(Pay)

On Nov 17, Madeline finishes her dinner and around 8pm, she receives an email telling her that she earned $200 from renting her driveway this two weeks and reminds her that payout has been made to her bank account. She is very happy with the money she has earned through Alee.
